Introduction

Supported by HSBC, JA Building a Financially Capable Generation is a multi-pronged educational program that equips students with concepts of financial capability. The program is constructed with two Educational Continuum - a foundational session to reinforce characteristics of a financially capable person, and an innovation challenge to enable students to demonstrate their learning in real-time.

Learning Objectives

Through engaging games and technology, and activities led by business volunteers, students will be able to:

- Increase their knowledge, skills, and experiences with money.
- Promote self-confidence and relationships (in person and online) that supports financial capability and personal resiliency.
