

Hong Kong / Society

Hong Kong students boost business know-how and find inspiration in plastic waste

- Hundreds of pupils channel their creativity as part of programme spearheaded by Junior Achievement Hong Kong
- Teams are making everything from umbrellas to notebooks to sell at virtual marketplace on March 13

Thomas Shum

Published: 11:30am, 6 Mar, 2021

Why you can trust SCMP

City Weekend FOLLOW

TOP PICKS

How does the Greater Bay Area raise unicorns? Paid Post InvestHK

Sensations Hong Kong detects first suspected local case of Delta Covid-19 variant 24 Jan 2021

News Apple Daily to close, printing 1 million copies for Thursday's last edition 24 Jan 2021

Sensations What you need to know about Hong Kong's quarantine rules 22 Jan 2021

News HSBC sorry after Hong Kong customers left worried about

A team called Unbounded has produced umbrellas made out of old plastic water bottles. Photo: Instagram

Hundreds of secondary school pupils are taking full advantage of the coronavirus pandemic to expand their business acumen and entrepreneurial spirit.

More than 60 student-led companies have created and built products to sell to the public, many of which are themed specifically on Hong Kong culture, bringing an element of local pride to these young entrepreneurs.